Headin' soon to these parts

A grand marshal has been selected for the annual Community Day Parade in West Sacramento, which begins at 1 p.m. this Sunday.

The grand marshal will be longtime resident and activist Juanita Lopez, 81.

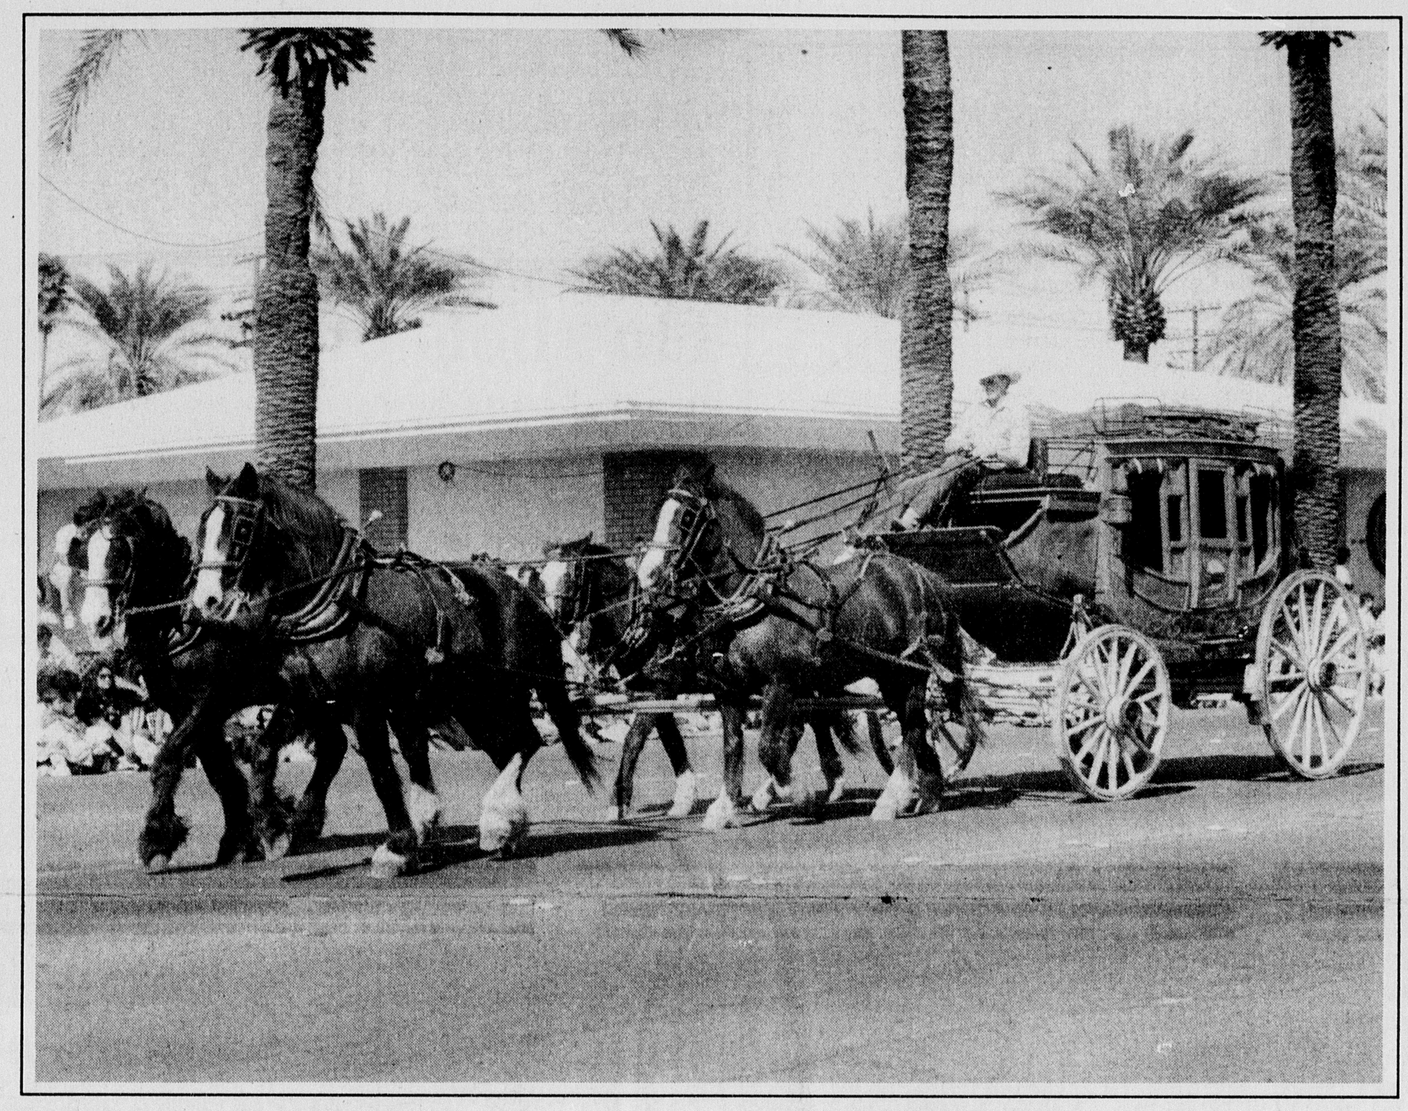
Lopez is described in a statement issued by the West Sacramento Chamber of Commerce, which is organizing the parade, as a "tireless volunteer and community activist. . . (who) has been a staple in the creation of the city and the building of the community."

She is a commissioner on the Yolo County Housing Board and volunteers for the Christmas in April project. She has served on the Salud Clinic Advisory Board, has been president of the East Yolo Senior Club and has worked on the local beautification committee. Her hobbies include dancing and attending musicals.

The parade will travel from Harbor Blvd. to Jefferson Blvd. beginning at 1 p.m. Bands, color guards, floats, dancers, horses, cars, drill teams and politicians will be some of the parade participants.

The parade will end at the Hometown Festival set up near Jefferson and West Capitol.

Information is available from the chamber at 371-7042.



THE WELLS FARGO STAGECOACH will join local school bands and other participants in the 21st annual Community Day Parade in West Sacramento on Sunday. The parade will start on West Capitol Ave. near Harbor Blvd. and end near Jefferson Blvd., with a reviewing stand near the Raley's supermarket.

Undercover officers arrest 14 in anti-hooker effort

The West Sacramento Police Dept. conducted a "sting" operation to combat the local prostitution trade, working undercover officers for five hours Thursday afternoon along West Capitol Ave.

Officers posed both as prostitutes and as their customers, or "johns."

Eight men and six women were booked into the Yolo County Jail as a result of the operation, according to a statement released by Sgt. Dan Ruden.

One 37-year old Sacramento man approached a police decoy who was posing as a prostitute and asked her to sell him drugs. When she said she didn't have any, he left, but he returned and asked again.

He was arrested for loitering for the purpose of making a drug transaction.

"He clearly had no idea who he was dealing with," stated Sgt. Ruden. "He was persistent, though, and he ended up getting more than he bargained for."

A wanted parole violator was also picked up during the sting.

The department was assisted by officers from the Sacramento Police Dept. and Sacramento Sheriff's Dept., who have begun working jointly with West Sacramento to combat prostitution on both sides of the river.

Motorcycle cops return to West Sacto

The motorcycle cops are back.

Following a period of lean city budgets, four West Sacramento police officers (three officers and a sergeant) have been trained for service on the department's four motorcycles. Their current mission is to help bring some order and safety to the traffic patterns at local schools as parents drop off their kids for classes.

"We now have four officers specially trained to work motorcycles," said Police Chief Larry Gore. "You don't just pick somebody and say, 'O.K., you're a motorcycle officer.' "

Instead, the officers must attend classes for training. In this case, training consisted of a two-week course in Los Angeles.

The officers will still serve the department in other ways, and not just on two-wheelers.

"Some days, we'll field them as motorcycle officers as we did today, and other days they'll be beat cops or do undercover police work," said Gore.

"At the moment, we've been focusing on some enforcement problems, working with all the schools to try to come up with traffic patterns to make it safer for kids being dropped off at school."

In the mornings on school days, parents need to be educated to drop their kids off safely, he added, and motorcycle officers are well-suited to cruising around the crowded traffic in front of schools to help.

Currently, parents are often dropping children off across from schools, so the young ones have to cross busy streets. Or they're making U-turns on the street or doing other unsafe things the police department hopes to discourage.

Campaign loan repaid

In the first test of a relatively new city campaign ordinance, only one candidate has so far stumbled -- and that, said the city clerk, has been resolved.

The ordinance restricts campaign donations to no more than $250 from any person, although a candidate may contribute his or her own money in any amount.

One candidate in the city council campaign, Mark Montemayor, reported accepting a $5,000 loan from his mother. But when he learned it was against the rules, he said last week, he repaid it.

Helen Kanowsky, the West Sacramento City Clerk, said her office considered the matter closed.

■ Local leadership needs a shake-up and a more business-like style, says hopeful for four-year seat on the city council

By Steve Marschke

"No matter who's elected, nothing will change unless the (council) majority is broken up," said Jim Cahill, who is running against three incumbents and hoping to win one of their seats.

Cahill, 37, has strong feelings that the leadership of West Sacramento needs to take a different tack.

A good part of that message is that she doesn't feel West Sacramento is protecting its future by making plans for permanent, long term city facilities such as a city hall or senior center.

West Sacramento has never had a city council without Bill Kristoff, and the 50-year old council incumbent is hoping it will be at least four more years before it ever does.

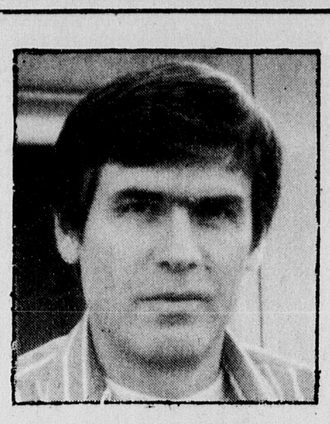
35 rules for capturing the heart of Mr. Right

My Back Pages



By Daryl Fisher

My twenty-two-year-old daughter recently handed me a shiny new book and said, "You gotta read this thing, Dad."

"Why?" I asked her, knowing that I already have a backlog of reading material which I'll probably never get to as it is.

"Because I bet you can get a great column out of it."

"Really?" I said, always on the lookout for a good column idea.

"It's really easy to read," she assured me. "It only took me about an hour to finish the whole thing."

"What's it about?" I asked her.

"It's called The Rules."

"Rules for what?"

"Rules for catching a man."

"But why would I want to catch a man?"

"Who does?" she said in her best man-hating voice. "All I know is that a lot of my girlfriends swear by the silly thing. Can you believe a book like that can actually get on the best-sellers list?"

As I leisurely thumbed through the book, which is subtitled 'Time-tested Secrets for Capturing the Heart of Mr. Right', I realized it was simply a list of 35 rules -- common sense guidelines, actually -- which the authors say women need to follow when trying to get themselves into a healthy, committed relationship. "To tell you the truth, " I said, "I don't see anything particularly terrible about this book."

"Are you kidding?" said my daughter, ripping the book back out of my hands and quickly flipping to the table of contents. "Just listen to some of these stupid rules. For instance, Rule #12 says, `Stop Dating Him if He Doesn't Buy You a Romantic Gift for Your Birthday or Valentine's Day'. Now just think if Mom would have followed that rule. I wouldn't even be here!"

"Hey," I quickly interjected, "let's leave me and your mother out of this."

"And get this, Rule #6, `Always End Phone Calls First'. Now who cares if the man or the woman ends a phone conversation first? What in the world does that have to do with anything?"

"Actually," I said, "now that's probably not a bad idea. I knew a girl once who somehow always managed to get off the phone first. She would say she had a million things to do, or that she had somewhere to go, and it used to drive me crazy."

"Really? And it made you like her more?"

"Well, if I recall correctly, it actually made me want to strangle her."

"Well, it says here that a woman shouldn't stay on the phone for an hour or two recounting her feelings on every incident of the day. If you do, it says you'll become transparent very quickly and run the risk of boring the guy to death. It even says to use a ten minute timer, can you believe that? When the bell goes off, you're supposed to hang up."

"Now I admit, that does sound a little bit manipulative."

"The whole book is manipulative! Listen to some of these other rules: Rule #5 -- Don't Call Him and Rarely Return His Calls; Rule #7 -- Don't Accept a Saturday Night Date After Wednesday; Rule #13 -- Don't See Him More than Once or Twice a Week; Rule #14 -- No More than Casual Kissing on the First Date."

"Hey," I interrupted with fatherly haste, "now that one sounds pretty good. In fact, I think you ought to give that one some serious thought."

"Then you'll love this one, too -- `Don't Live with a Man or Leave Your Things in His Apartment'."

"An excellent rule indeed!"

"What do you think of this one? `Don't Stare at Men or Talk Too Much'?"

"Well, I think there's much to be said for the second part of that one."

"There's even a rule that says you shouldn't discuss The Rules with your therapist."

"Well," I admitted, "I've always been a big believer in never telling a therapist more than he or she needs to know."

"So, what are you saying here, Dad? Do you really think women should be slaves to a bunch of stupid rules just so they can trap some guy into getting married?"

"To tell you the truth," I said, "when it comes to marriage, I think the best rule just might be the old Bob Dole rule."

"What in the world is the old Bob Dole rule?"

"Just don't do it!"

From Barbosa's Karate West Sacramento

On September 28, the American Tae Kwon Do Association" (ATA) held the "West Coast Championships" in Modesto, California.

1st degree black belt Bryan Folkner of Barbosa's Karate dominated the ten-year-old division, shutting out all opponents he faced. Folkner took home first place in forms and first place in sparring.

In early October, Folkner received permission from Grand Master H.U. Lee, 9th black belt president of the ATA, to become a junior instructor. Folkner has recently received confirmation that he is now ranked as one of the top ten competitors in the world.

On October 19 in Chicago, Illinois, the young black belt from West Sacramento stepped up and defeated all opponents in the ATA's fall national championships, taking home the gold to West Sacramento again.

Tough weather & tough Lincoln team for RC

By Josh Branham
River City High School

On a cold and wet Friday night in Lincoln, the River City Raiders' varsity football team went looking to go 2-0 in league play. But the Lincoln Fighting Zebras had other ideas. They were looking to avenge the beating they took last year at the hands of the Raiders.

In the first quarter both teams struggled offensively, until Jared Stephens put the Zebras on the board with a four-yard touchdown run. The extra point kick missed giving the Zebras a 6-0 lead. The Raiders responded with a 25-yard touchdown run by Juan Acevedo. Quarterback Gary Herren ran in the two point conversion. This gave the Raiders an 8-6 lead that they took to the half. There was no scoring in the second quarter.

Lincoln had a huge third quarter, which was started by a six-yard Jared Stephens touchdown. The two point conversion was run in. That gave Lincoln a 14-8 lead. Then Stephens scored on another six-yard run. The two point conversion was good. This increased the Lincoln lead to 22-8. Then to round out the Lincoln scoring, linebacker Gage Lawley returned an interception ten yards for a touchdown. The extra point kick was good. Lincoln had a 29-8 lead heading to the fourth quarter.

The Raiders started off the fourth quarter with a Gary Herren option run touchdown. The two point conversion run failed. The Lincoln lead was now 29-14. Lincoln's linebacker Sam Ghita ran in a 22-yard touchdown run off an interception. The two point conversion was good. The score was now 37-14 Lincoln. To end the scoring, Lincoln's Herrera scored on a nine-yard run. The extra point kick missed. The game ended with a 43-14 Lincoln win.

The Raider junior varsity squad also lost, a nail-biting 25-20.

Next week is the Raiders' homecoming game, where they will face league rival Colfax. Look for a rough and tough game from both teams, with maybe a Raider victory?

The Braves are headed back to Atlanta, after whipping the Yankees in New York, for games 3, 4 and 5 (if necessary).

The Braves routed the Yankees 12-1 in game 1 and shut them out 4-0 in game 2. OF the 43 previous teams to take a 2-0 lead in the best-of-seven series, 33 have won the series.

The Atlanta Braves are in their fourth World Series in six years. Bud did you know that since 1903, the Braves have played in just eight World Series and in 44 total games? But they can't match the Yankees' heritage, who have played in the most World Series (34 in all), and 190 total games.

I don't think history is going to help the Yankees this year, because what they need is some good old fashioned hitting and pitching!

The Braves fans will have the old tomahawks working again, so the Yankees could be in for a short week!

The 49ers got an early Halloween scare last Sunday from the Bengals. The 49ers were two touchdown favorites, but trailed the Bengals 21-0 late into the second quarter. The Bengals injured Young (pulled groin) and when Elvis came in to relieve the shaky Niners offense, the Bengals defense did a "whole lot of shakin' " on Grbac, knocking him out of the game with a shoulder injury.

Young had to return to the game and limped to his best game of the year. Young rallied the troops to a 28-21 come-from-behind victory that cost the Bengals coach Dave Shula his job. It was fun watching the 49ers battle back to win a game that looked lost in the first half.

The 49ers (5-2), tied for first with Carolina, travel to Houston with two beat-up quarterbacks to play the 5-2 Oilers, who beat the Steelers 23-13 last week.

49ers 27, Oilers 13.

The Oakland Raiders have won three in a row!! They saved their coach's job with a 23-14 victory over the San Diego Chargers. The Chargers lost their starting QB, Stan Humphries, in the first quarter, and it was all downhill for San Diego. The Raiders defense was great, holding the Chargers to 29 yards rushing. The Raiders are now 4-4 and have climbed back into the AFC West race. The Raiders have a bye this week before they come back to host the division-leading Denver Broncos (6-1) on Monday night football Nov. 4 at the Oakland Coliseum.

Promoter Don Chargin returns professional boxing to the Memorial Auditorium in downtown Sacramento on Thurs., Nov. 14. The boxing reunion called "Down Memory Lane" will honor some of the greatest boxers ever to fight in Sacramento, which will include some fighters like Pete Ranzany, Sal Lopez, Tony Lopez, Stan Ward, Joe Guevara, Loreto Garza, Joey Lopes and many more.

The 10-round main event will feature West Sac's Willie Jorrin (14-0, 8 KOs) against George "Pistol" Parra (29-1, 18 KOs) of Vallejo. Tickets priced at $22, $32, and $42, can be purchased at 1301 L St. or call me at 372-7332.

Freshmen win 28 to zero

By Chuck Robinson

The River City High School freshman football team scored another shut-out against Marysville last Thursday night, 28 to 0.

River City couldn't start moving until the second quarter and scored on a pass play from Clay Harrell to Robert Cervantes for a 15-yard touchdown, and Andrew Hoekstra kicked to lead, 7 to 0.

In the third quarter, with 5:04 left, Malfred Shaw scored on a 15-yard run and the pass failed, to lead, 13 to 0. With 4:20 left in the third, Cervantes scored on a 12-yard run and penalties moved the ball back to the 15-yard line for the conversion and quarterback Brooks Marino scrambled around and passed to Eric King for the conversion to lead, 21 to 0. With 1:36 left in the third, Cervantes scored again on a 12-yard run and Hoekstra kicked to end the scoring at 28 to 0. That makes six straight shut-outs for the fresh-

Elect
MARK MONTEMAYOR, JIM CAHILL BILL KRISTOFF and CHARLES MOORE

Good people of West Sacramento,

For those of you wondering why I am so vigorously supporting Mark Montemayor, Jim Cahill, Bill Kristoff and Charles Moore in the upcoming election on November 5, and why I am seeking to retire Greg Potnick and Cindy Tuttle, 21 reasons are below:

Reason 1 – Rearrange Zoning

The decision on May 10, 1995 by the City Council to rearrange the zoning of commercial properties that have existed since the 1970s, in spite of the protest of myself and other affected owners, has not only a derogatory effect on the value of our properties. It has, in my case, stopped my planned intent to personally develop commercially the property.

My partners and I have owned the property between Gregory Ave. and Jefferson Blvd. for a long time. It comprises 13 1/2 acres and has been commercial since before we become a city and is ideal for commercial purposes. It has been capriciously changed to 2 1/2 acre house lots which are not nearly as valuable. This is a financial loss to me and the other owners with down zone properties. However, the people of Southport also lose. They lose a very desirable location for commercial services. This 13 1/2 acres is bordered by three important roads: Jefferson Blvd., Gregory Ave., and Davis Road. It is deep into Southport where a commercial development will greatly reduce the necessity to drive long distances, or go to many different locations.

Reason 2 – Old Time West Sac citizens: Who Cares?

Thinking that there would be a future for normal housing in Southport, I purchased with my partners 19 1/2 acre lots at Davis and Partridge Roads. Half-acre lots are a good size, around 100 X 220. The three council majority, who seem to feel that it is their destiny to rule the town, and that nothing has a right to exist without their imprimatur, saw fit to change what has existed for a long time and is satisfactory to the owners. Here is what they have changed our property to: three (3) 1 acre lots, and to crown their unreasonableness, two (2) 2 1/2 acre lots, 60 feet and 813 deep. Who is interested in buying such monstrosities? The property will be worth far less than 1/2 its original value.

My neighbor, Mr. Meiers, who has 5 acres across the street from our lots, has attended all the meetings and has owned his property for 48 years. Beers, Potnick, and Tuttle, who are running the town like alligators running a swamp, did not give that old man, trying to protect his investment, the time of day, certainly no respect. They simply trashed his dreams and made a swamp out of his property.

Reason 3 – Mello Roos

The city borrows money on your signature and you guarantee your property as collateral at the bank. $100.00 per acre. I personally pay $5500.00 on extra Mello Roos fees per year and then they rearrange the zoning of my property. The term for this is breach of contract. I call this robbery by City Hall.

Reason 4 – Elected Officials Must Listen to its Citizens; They Listen But They Do Not Hear

The city council calls public meetings and public hearings for public input. But the good citizens of West Sacramento are just pawns in this game. I came to the United States, like many of your parents and grandparents, with 15 cents and a loaf of bread. I never had to beg. But when I went to the city council meeting about my property down zoning, I begged them to just leave my property alone. I learned I do not like begging. I feel like I am less a man when I have to beg. I also learned a lot about public input. Tom Jules, Tom Carpenter, Lou Arges, Mr. Meiers, Irene Eklund, Pat Flint, the nice lady in the wheel chair, Bob Mahalison, William Lowell, and many others spoke to the City Council. THEY LISTENED, BUT THEY DID NOT HEAR. The meetings are only held to make what they do legal. The three person majority LISTEN but are too smart to HEAR. They are at the top of the ladder and are stepping on the fingers of the good citizens of West Sacramento. The council majority thinks we are a bunch of dumb sheep. Sheep get sheared once a year; the citizens of West Sacramento get sheared at every meeting of the City Council.

Reason 5 – Bad Luck or Bad Judgement

I sincerely hope the voting citizens of our potentially wonderful city will begin to realize, then understand, that it has not been bad luck that has caused progress in the uptown and riverfront area to stalemate. It has not been bad luck that much of our original wealth has been squandered. It has not been bad luck that the value of the uptown properties have diminished. This has been caused by the complete disregard of the views of the people directly involved.

Many of the business people in the uptown area feel that had the council helped that area become the best it could be, it would have become far better than it is, and well on it's way to a new destiny, which at its culmination will complement the area on the other side of the river.

Progress should be lead by business people that have to invest and take the responsibility for success. Instead, the three majority has taken the position that the best course is pseudo erudite studies that stimulate the academic banter that goes on at the council meetings. This approach has gotten us no place, cost a lot of money, and put the future of our town in jeopardy.

Reason 6 – Study This, Study That, Study to Death

The City Council must work harder to retain and support existing businesses. A healthy business environment will do more for progress than all the studies, pontifications, and manipulations of the various rate structures. If the City owns large pieces of property in an assessment district, does this shift all the cost to other owners in a given area or is that assessment met by all the taxpayers?

Reason 7 – Garbage Monopoly

How about garbage? There is garbage monopoly in our City. There is no way to get a fair deal with a monopoly. The garbage company sets the price for all garbage. Then the City Council decides who pays what. A system with this procedure can never be fair. Front loader bins for apartments, mobile home parks, and businesses should be served by at least three competing companies. Business people should be allowed to dicker and make the best deal for their situation.

Reason 8 – Why Are Our City's Fees Higher Than Others?

West Sacramento will still be higher than most of the surrounding cities. Don't we want to be competitive? Where is the city going to growth and tax base to finance the top-rated city we all want? Have you wondered why there have no houses built behind Touchstone or around the golf course? Could it be that the fee structure has raised the price of new houses out of sight?

Reason 9 – Road Blocks or Progress

The young family that decides to buy a lot and build a home is faced with the base of $38,000.00 in fees before they even buy the lumber.

Reason 10 – Do You Want the Redevelopment Agency to Have Control of 20% of Your Tax Money?

Did you know that 20% of all the property tax money we collect goes to the redevelopment fund?

Reason 11 – Never Met a Fee They Didn't Like

The finance director and the three majority seem to literally drool at the thought of more money to finance studies and engage in the academic titillation about the wonderful future for our city.

In my opinion, the three majority has never seen a fee, a cost, or a regulation they didn't like. Many of the cities have a richer population than we do. The working class population that lives here now will pay when they move, remodel or fix their property.

This Council majority will get to you one at a time. It is not always the other guy that feels the pain. How about your children? Will they be able to afford to build and live here? The City Council is pricing all the ordinary people out the affordable housing market. The three majority has already priced neighborhood business out of our city. The three majority approves any tax or fee that the finance director comes up with to raise money. They go after taxes like a vampire goes after blood.

Reason 12 – What Do Our Citizens Need to Do?

When King George of England was trying to give the thirteen colonies the tax and regulation shaft, our General George crossed the river in small boats at night and got rid of George III's red coated boys. All we have to do to solve our problems is go to the polls and elect someone with good sense.

Reason 13 – Don't Try to Fix Your Roof

Do you believe the controlling three city council persons know everything? The other day I was fixing my roof because it leaked in the last rain. The revenuers from the city made me stop, go down to City Hall, fill out papers, and give them money. People have been fixing their own roofs for years without interference from the revenuers and commissars. These people want complete control. It won't be long before you will have to get permission and pay a fee to cut your grass or sweep your sidewalk.

Reason 14 – Who Has the Ear of Staff and Elected Officials?

We have to get this city moving. The City, and also other people have land in our fair city to develop. The administrators of our City must learn to work with both large and small developers. They LISTEN, but they only HEAR those they want to HEAR. The council three majority likes a lot of pomp and process. They don't seem to understand that most business is run by just plain blood and guts good sense. There is nothing wrong with selling the land the City owned at a reasonable price. Give some consideration to what the developer wants to build and then give him 3 years free property tax. They do this in Italy and it works very well. These people need to feel wanted, not ruled. In the mean time, you will collect all those building fees, the sales tax and maybe even a little beautification. You wet their appetite and desire to build in West Sacramento. (I love beautiful Prop. 13.) If the building sells, you also start collecting a higher property tax. Your finance director should understand this. (You catch more flies with honey than you do with vinegar.)

Reason 15 – The El Rancho: If It Had Been Purchased By The Three Majority, It Could Have Been A Beautiful City Hall

The El Rancho was sold for $2,000,000.00. That was 16 plus acres of administrative buildings, enough room to run the police, the fire department, the planning department, the whole city. This is when the three majority missed the opportunity to purchase a fabulous location for City Hall.

Reason 16 – Harbor Blvd. Project

It's beautiful, it's well done, and it looks good. But the three majority spent too much money and it took too long to complete.

Reason 17 – Money Store Project

Beautiful, 2000 expected employees. But, between land, building fees, and redevelopment money, the cost to the city is going to be $29 million dollars. Is this what you elected the three majority to do?

Reason 18 – Palamidessi Bridge Under Construction

I'm very happy it is under construction. It's necessary for Southport, but it took too long. The first estimate by Buzz Oates, Frank Ramos, Bryan Turner, Chamber of Commerce, The Mello Roos people, and the City, was $7 million dollars. Now, I understand that the City signed a contract for $19 million dollars and the adding machine tape is still running. Is that what you elected the three majority to do?

Reason 19 – Vacation Inn

Let's talk about the Vacation Inn. How much are we in on this one? Between purchase price, interest, tax loss, management expenses for the last six or seven years, $10,000.00 to each evicted tenant, $200.00 for each boarded window, cost to tear down the building, and law suits, the total cost is at $30,000,000.00 and the adding machine tape is still running. When the city puts this 2 plus acres for sale, I don't expect they'll get over 1/2 million dollars. If I am correct, that is a $29.5 million dollar loss for the city. Is this what you elected the three majority to do?

Reason 20 – Will Businesses Take the Risk and Improve Their Property?

(Trust me.) Since I started handing signs, I have talked to many business people that I have known for years. The business people are afraid to move. What I hear is very simple. They are afraid of the City Commissars. They know if they try to do anything, the City Rulers will make them do things that will make the cost 10 times what it should be. There is no trust of the controlling three, only fear. The average person that lives in a house just does not realize the hassle, expense, and grief bureaucracy under incompetent leadership can cause. We must have change. The controlling three are more thrilled with power than the benefit of progress. The businessmen are like sardines in a can. If he feels like he cannot move, the City won't move. For 8 years, these people have been playing with our future. TAKE AWAY THEIR POWER. Elect Mark Montemayor, Jim Cahill, Bill Kristoff and Charles Moore. Our little city has every reason to bloom and prosper.

Reason 21 – Are You Better Off Now Than Before Incorporation?

It is time we make some changes in our city council. The citizens must be ready to vote in new people. We need people that make judgement based on good business sense. Businesses, including small businesses, are the life blood of any community. In this area, we are worse off than we were 10 years ago. The river front is a mess, West Capitol and the industrial area are vacant, plans for six lanes on Jefferson Blvd., and talk of a sewer plant in the middle of established housing in Southport, which is sure to diminish values of these properties. (The council does not care; they don't live there.) The zoning ordinance has been rewritten and has caused great financial loss to many of our residents. When will it stop? We all need to go out and vote. We need to take our city back.

These are some of the reasons I would like to see Greg Potnick and Cindy Tuttle retired. I hope you understand more clearly now. I do not want Greg Potnick and Cindy Tuttle to have the power to rearrange anymore of my property or yours. Don't be fooled into believing that it can't happen to you. I urge you to cast your votes for Mark Montemayor, Jim Cahill, Bill Kristoff, and Charles Moore on November 5. If you do, this will eliminate many of the problems our little city is now facing. The choice is yours. On November 6, 1996, I will live in harmony with anyone you choose. And I will still be your neighbor and your friend.

OPINION

News-Ledger Editorial

Aptly named and worth the wait

The West Sacramento Police Department will shortly be moving into its new (but still temporary) headquarters near Jefferson Blvd. and Triangle Court. Officers will bid adieu to their cramped and unsuitable quarters at the old sheriff's substation near the foot of the I Street Bridge.

The new facility will bear the name of the only West Sacramento Police Department officer yet to have been killed in the line of duty, James McKnight.

McKnight was killed early in the city's history, while working with a Yolo County drug enforcement squad which was serving a search warrant at a home in Madison. The home was suspected of being involved in the drug trade. While the officers entered, a man barricaded himself in back. An exchange of gunfire occurred and McKnight was killed.

It should be noted that soon after the officer's death, some locals proposed re-naming Sacramento Avenue in his honor. This idea was well-intended, but not very practical. Re-naming an established local street would have been a major inconvenience to those whose businesses and homes used it for their addresses. It would have required some businesses to change their stationery and letterhead, for example. The backlash from such a proposal could have turned what should be a unanimously given honor for a fallen officer into a civic controversy.

As a matter of city policy, it is better to name a new facility, park or street in memorial than to re-name a long-established one.

The name of the new James H. McKnight Police Facility is an appropriate way to honor one officer's sacrifice. When the police department finally moves into its more permanent headquarters sometime down the line, the name should follow.

Letters to the Editor

Opposing Ohlson

For 25 years, Grace Ohlson, Vince Frugoli, and I have been on opposite sides of almost every issue. Mrs. Ohlson believes that government, and its control, is the solution. Mr. Frugoli and I believe that government, and its control, is the problem.

It is easy to understand why Mrs. Ohlson doesn't realize how valuable a commercial development, providing closer and more convenient shopping, would be to all who live in Southport, especially the many seniors. Mrs. Ohlson doesn't live in Southport. In my 16 years as supervisors for Yolo County, I learned to know Mrs. Ohlson and I how hard she has tried to rule. However, I am sure that Mrs. Ohlson's continuous support for Greg Potnick, Cindy Tuttle and Wes Beers, is respected by all. At least there is one thing everyone can agree on: Mr. Frugoli's excellent spaghetti!

Supporting Vince

I would like to respond to the paid political article placed in your paper by Vince Frugoli. This article was a reprint of a News-Ledger item from a May 1995 edition. I was surprised to see it reprinted again. I said it then and I repeat saying it now, this was the way I felt then and still do to this day.

Elected public officials can and do turn peoples lives around by changing zonings. At the time it took one vote more to leave our zoning as it was, both on our residential property and the commercial property. Perhaps in the future we can resubmit it to the council for their consideration.

Half acre and acre lots are ample to build homes on as you can see on Jefferson Blvd. and scattered throughout the whole Southport area. Two and one-half acre lots are hard to maintain and take care of.

Anti-Potnick & Tuttle

We agree 100% with Vince.

Greg Potnick and his boot licker Cindy Tuttle care nothing about the rights of others.

As for Ms. Bartley's remarks about Vince:

We've known Vince for over 30 years. He worked for everything he owns and he deserves to do as he pleases with it!

'No' on Cahill

As a voting resident of West Sacramento I'm a bit concerned about Mr. Jim Cahill's pursuit of a seat on the city council. I believe that as a prospective member of the council it's imperative that one posses the ability to effectively communicate with other people on a professional level. Unfortunately, while observing Mr. Cahill interact with the public during his term as a planning commission, he showed me that he lacked this basic skill. I observed him display an insensitive arrogance about himself which left me feeling as if he wasn't interested in hearing any opinions unless they were consistent with his. Consequently, I believe his approach falls far short of creating any atmosphere where real "dialogue" can occur, as his current campaign literature claims he will do if elected. In fact, it was this same unprofessional approach with members of this community which ultimately caused Mr. Cahill to give up his seat on the commission.

It further concerns me that in a campaign where limiting campaign contributions has often the topic of discussion, his campaign has already accepted considerable financial support from a local businessman to help erect large billboard-type signs throughout the city. It would seem to me that any candidate who accepts this amount of financial support from one individual, either shares an agenda with this individual or has already conceded to an agenda for the future which has yet to be publicized.

This leads me only to conclude that Mr. Cahill's relentless pursuit of a council seat is more the result of a personal vendetta against various members of this community, rather than any altruistic attempt to lead this city down the right path.

'Yes' on Miller

Meadowdale Association is pleased to endorse Marna Miller as candidate for City Council.

We feel that Marna Miller has presented and excellent platform and her ideas and understanding will be a great asset to the City of West Sacramento.

Marna Miller has proven to us without a doubt what our concerns are for the future of West Sacramento.

We need Marna Miller for City Council to open the eyes of what is going on now and in the future of West Sacramento.

Property rights

I found great humor and contradiction in Carolyn Ellison Bartley's letter. My concern is the blatant disregard for a fellow citizen's rights. Contrary to the letter, Mr. Frugoli did not request a higher density of housing than the zoning plan allowed. He only requested that the zoning remain as it was when purchased. 1/2 acre lots! The issue is not whether or not Mr. Frugoli gets "as big a piece of the pie as he wants." The issue is Mr. Frugoli's right to have the same piece of pie that he purchased, no more, no less.

I would like to point out the first and fifth amendments of our Constitution. The first amendment is Freedom of Speech and Press. To my understand, a person has a right to state their opinion freely, whether it be to support candidates of choice for whatever reasons, or to defend and protect what is rightfully theirs. The fifth amendment is Rights in Criminal Cases. This amendment has provisions to protect private property from confiscation, or regulation or land use, by governing bodies. This right is protected by our Constitution as fully as our other rights. It is wonderful to want to preserve the pastoral character and charm, which were stated to be "swiftly disappearing in America." Perhaps, efforts should also be made to preserve peoples' rights, which seem to be swiftly disappearing as well.

I agree that "cramming houses on land" cannot be considered pastoral. However, we are talking about placing 1 home per 1/2 acre lot. The fact is that the majority of homes in our residential areas are on lots smaller than 1/2 acre. If placing 1 home on a 1/2 acre lot is "cramming," how is it justified to allow another developer to place 11-13 units per acre just a few miles down the road?

A long-time property owners has suffered an injustice in the name of land-use regulation. As the dictionary defines, a victim is a sufferer from any destructive, injurious or adverse action or agency. Nowhere in this definition does it state or imply that an individual's financial status should have bearing on whether or not the individual is a legitimate victim.

Despite the fact that I am one of the "many of us in West Sacramento can't even afford to own our own homes," I most certainly do not begrudge those who worked long and hard for all that they have. Years of hard work and consistent business sense earn a man his "plate." One would be wise to take note of, and attempt to imitate, these methods by which success is achieved, striving to earn one's own "plate," rather than wanting a "spoonful" from someone else's plate.

This letter is not intended to support or oppose any candidates of the upcoming election on November 5. As I stated in the beginning, I am just concerned at the thought of a citizen's right being ignored. And as my grandfather always used to say, "For those that understand, no explanation is necessary. For those that don't understand, no explanation is possible."

Election questions

As the election campaign for City Council enters the final couple of weeks, it seems to me that two items have emerged which clearly define certain council candidates. The voters should focus on the two items listed below before voting on November 5:

1. Violations of Election Laws

As I understand it, West Sacramento has a campaign ordinance that limits political contributions to candidates to $250.00. I also believe that the State Fair Political Practice Commission (FPPC) mandates that all contributions over $100.00 be itemized and reported on forms provided by the FPPC. Why then did council candidate Mark Montemayor accept a campaign loan (contribution?) of $5,000.00 from a relative of his on July 22, 1996, and not report it on his campaign statement? His campaign statement claims the loan (contribution?) was repaid or forgiven on August 14, 1996. If it was repaid, who repaid it? If it was forgiven, why isn't listed as campaign income? It seems that candidate Montemayor has violated election laws and committed a misdemeanor. Now ask yourself: Is this the type of person you want controlling your tax money?

2. The Vince Frugoli Slate

Mr. Frugoli, the Donald Trump of West Sacramento, had his feelings hurt by a council decision that he claims violated his rights as a property owner. It boils down to this: Mr. Frugoli bought enormous amounts of property in Southport speculating that, in the future, he could use the property for high density housing (apartments, small subdivisions, motels, etc.) Like Mr. Trump, he was and is a land speculator. But, when you speculate, sometimes you win and sometimes you lose. Mr. Frugoli still stands to make a sizable profit off his property -- just not what he had speculated he would make. Now, like Mr. Trump and other rich guys who don't get what they want, he is crying foul and using his sizable monetary resources to make things more favorable for him. Thus we have his hand -- chosen council candidates. I call them the Montegoli/Fruhil slate. I'm sure that the Montegoli/Fruhil slate has promised Mr. Frugoli his just rewards if they are elected. By the way, why haven't either of these candidates claimed Mr. Frugoli's campaign contributions on their campaign statements? Surely they can't claim that they have no knowledge of Mr. Frugoli's help on behalf of their campaigns. If they do, do you folks really believe it?

If you are that gullible and do believe it, why hasn't Mr. Frugoli filed the necessary forms with the city and the FPPC? These people have violated city and state laws. Shouldn't the district attorney be looking into this whole mess? Voter beware.

Campbell for college board

As the parents of two young children, we are excited about having Davis Campbell serve on the Los Rios Community College Board. With Davis on the board, we know the educational interests of students and families are in good hands.

It is especially important for the people of West Sacramento to keep Davis on the board. Currently he is the only representative from Yolo County on the board. Through the years, Davis has been an active member in our community and with our city's Chamber of Commerce. We can think of no person we'd rather have making important decisions about the future of education than Davis Campbell. He always listens carefully and acts thoughtfully.

Pro-Campbell

As a resident of West Sacramento and a product of the Los Rios Community College system (I graduated from Sacramento City College before moving on to California State University, Sacramento), I believe in the extreme importance in having a Yolo County resident on the Los Rios Community Colleges District Board.

Currently, Davis Campbell, executive director of the California School Board Association and former Assistant Superintendent of Public Instruction under Wilson Riles, is our representative on the Los Rios Community Colleges Board. It is especially important that we, in West Sacramento, recognize that importance and vote for him November 5 to continue on the board. Every other board member is from Sacramento and if Mr. Campbell is not elected, there is a good chance that every single member will be from Sacramento. While I hold no ill will toward our neighbors to the east of us, I feel strongly that Mr. Campbell more represents our needs than do they.

Davis Campbell gives West Sacramento and Yolo County a powerful voice and presence on the Los Rios board. His knowledge of education issues and his familiarity with our own local needs and issues are unsurpassed by any of the other candidates.

When people speak of our community college system, we need to be certain that West Sacramento is considered a vital part of that community. Davis Campbell is a trustee who will help ensure that West Sacramento's students, families and businesses have access to the community college programs and services they need.

Please join me in voting for Davis Campbell on November 5.

We're one community

In addition to finding the term "temporary" over-used by the city council and staff, I would like to see them discontinue using the expression "West Sacramento and Southport." As I have said before, I do not believe they are aware how often they say this. It is an expression that, through constant use, gives the impression that two separate communities are being discussed.

When it was decided that a city would be formed by a vote of the people and the consent of LAFCO, the boundary of that city was explicit. LAFCO told the members of the committee who worked for incorporation that they could choose a name, but, after a discussion by the 200 members, it was agreed that the voters would select a name for the new city. Personally, I had hoped the new city would have a new name.

We, the voters, decided the name for our city would be West Sacramento. It was not decided, by a vote of the people, that the name of this city is "West Sacramento and Southport."

Southport is one of the sections of West Sacramento. It is not a separate entity.

Perhaps council members and staff have become so involved with the new development needs of the southern part of our city that, unconsciously, they place those needs above and apart from the needs of the rest of the city. If so, that would be disturbing.

Lots of work has been done to bring new business here and to upgrade Harbor Blvd. When I suggested more should be done on code enforcement, particularly with absentee land-lords, I was told it was in the works. That is great, but too slow in coming. Just saying we have a redevelopment program to improve the older areas in our city is not showing signs of improvement being advanced. It is understandable that everything cannot be done at once. it is just not acceptable that the money and staff time seem easier to find for the new development then for the re-development.

Even before we became a city the northern section of town seemed to be the stepchild. I, for one, had high hopes and worked darned hard to separate us from the county's neglect so we could improve as a whole, not as segmented communities. I know I was not the only one who felt that way. Now I would like to see the northern part of town have more representation. That is another reason why I am running for the two-year term on the city council. Perhaps in two years we can encourage and back others from this part of town to also run. Or else we may have to start district representation according to the number of voters in each section of town.

Again, we have come a long way in ten years. There was just so much that needed doing. That was why over 70% of the voters said "Yes" to becoming a city. Now we must realize that West Sacramento's design as a "Premier City" cannot be reached unless our council and staff think of this as a united effort, from our northern boundary to the southern tip of the city. If one side of town does not keep up with the other, neither will be "premier."

If it has somehow been recommended that, in spite of all the work being done to lead this city to a "premier" status, the name West Sacramento cannot overcome it's negative image, then the voters should be told. The voters, not the council, the staff or some other segment of the community, will decide about a possible name change.

Until then, this is the city of West Sacramento. Let's keep working to achieve what we were aiming for ten years ago when we decided to become a city.
DOROTHY B. ADAMO
Candidate for West Sacramento City Council

Tax money at work

The Chamber of Commerce of West Sacramento, by taking sides in the County/Gravel mining Measure on the ballot, raises public policy issues for the City Council.

The Chamber of Commerce is publicly financed by our tax dollars, not just business dollars.

Should the Council continue to give tax dollars if the Chamber engages in political activity, especially if the Chamber does not poll the community and study all sides?

Part of the explanation of the insensitivity of the Executive Board lies in the fact that the majority of members do not live in West Sacramento.

It is personally disappointing to me that the Chamber, which had showed signs of becoming a real community organization, working to bring understanding of mutual problems of the residents and the business community also was so confused as to think that Measure C, the shallow mining initiative was anti-business.

The Yolo County Taxpayers Association endorsed Measure C and said "No" on the dirty mining measure of the County/Gravel miners deep-pit-entitlements for 30-50 years. They understood that Measure C was based on a county EIR study showing that C, shallow mining, was the best alternative.

The Chamber of Commerce may have been confused, but I believe the voters of West Sacramento, noting the extraordinary number of consultants paid for by the gravel industry who have called and the numerous mailings plus the fact that the citizens had to go to court to have the ballot language less misleading (ballot still leaves out the fact that the gravel mining measure leaves out the fact that it is deep-pit mining).

Will vote for:
Clean water -- C -- Yes.
Dirty water -- D -- No.

Yes on C, No on D

I recently watched the League of Women Voters program on Channel 21 regarding Measures C & D on gravel mining. The speakers for Measure D stated that gravel companies have vested rights to mine in the creek apparently without any limitations. I had heard this before and again more recently in mailers from Jan Lowrey and Kevin Wolf, respectively. I thought that when the gravel companies run out of gravel under their permits that ended it. The Lowery letter states that Measure C "allows mining to continue in Cache Creek indefinitely"; and the Wolf letter states that if Measure C passes, "mining will continue in Cache Creek." Do vested rights mean that they can mine Cache Creek to any depth and also that the Board of Supervisors will have to issue permits for additional land merely because they are already there? I have inquired around about this, but none seemed to know. Finally I heard that the league had obtained a legal analysis of the two ordinances and obtained a copy. What I found out was quite surprising.

First of all, the Hansen case that they mention does not support the gravel companies position at all; rather, it sets forth the many limitations that exist on such vested rights. For example, under the police power the county can enact zoning laws which restrict existing nonconforming uses. Also, no damages can be recovered unless all beneficial use of the property is denied. Well, Cache Creek has lots of uses other than gravel mining. Also, the Hansen case as quoted states specifically that such zoning may extend to the extraction to adjoining properties, or other properties as a matter of a vested right. It seems to me that the claim of vested rights is simply a house of cards.

One case quoted stated that the adoption of a zoning law that looks toward the "containment and eventual elimination of nonconforming uses, including rock and gravel operations, accords with recognized zoning objectives under settled legal principles." Another authority stated in regard to the police power that "no right can be said to be completely vested as against that power, and the state's inherent sovereign power includes the police power right to interfere with vested property rights whenever reasonably necessary to protect the health, safety, morals, and general welfare of the people."

Measure C permits the county to amend permits in order "to maintain hydraulic conveyance and structural integrity, or improve riparian habitats." It also does not prohibit the revocation of permits as allowed under the police power. Just as importantly, the mining cannot go beyond the permitted property, nor can the mining go below the theoretical thalweg. In other words, it ultimately comes to an end when the gravel is mined out or mining is no longer profitable. Mining does not go on indefinitely as contended by Measure D supporters and Measure C does not permit deep pit mining as provided for on Measure D. Vote YES on MEASURE C. Vote NO on MEASURE D. How much research, if any, did the Board of Supervisors do before they decided to give the gravel miners a golden parachute?

ter," she said in a recent interview. "It's time to stop thinking' temporary.' We have to start thinking 'permanent,' and we have to start doing it."

"What made me decide to run for council was when Bill (Kristoff) said we don't want to take any more land off the tax rolls for a senior center," she said. "We have to take land off the tax rolls for this now, or we won't be able to afford it later."

Adamo feels passionately that the city should stop investing in "temporary" facilities for its city hall, police department and other needs, and should at least obtain the land for longer-term solutions.

"Sell the land the city owns that's not appropriate, and use the money to invest in land that's appropriate for city buildings and a senior center," Adamo suggests. "Whether I'm on the council or not, I want the city to stop renting. We're too busy working on developing the southern part of our city and we forgot we're trying to build a whole city."

Another issue close to Adamo's heart is that she feels the city is on the wrong track in planning to combine a future senior citizens' residence with a senior center -- perhaps at the Margaret McDowell Manor on Merkley Ave.. Seniors need a quiet refuge, she maintains, and it is not a good idea to put an activities center in the same building as the residences.

She does not see the senior issue as a self-serving one, she added, since the choices we make about seniors' facilities now won't affect people for perhaps another ten years. People who are now 45 years old ought to be very concerned about our plans for senior residences and facilities, she added.

Adamo 69, is a familiar activist in West Sacramento, although this is the first time she has run for city council.

A single woman, she is the only person running from a residence in the city's north area, which has been traditionally lower-income and under-represented in West Sacramento local government.

Adamo has been a resident of the city's "Bryte" neighborhood in the northwest for about 30 years, she said. She served as the publicist for the effort to incorporate West Sacramento ten years ago.

And she chaired the biggest political campaign in the young city's history in 1990, when she headed the Truth In Planning group. Her campaign raised over $100,000, primarily from business interests, to successfully defend plans for industrial development in part of the city's south. That industrial development had been challenged by a citizens' initiative.

Adamo has also worked on commissions involving county issues, education, hazardous materials management, city strategic planning and business/education partnerships, as well as helping to organize such local events as the Founders Day Picnic.

She now operates her own public relations company, Adamo & Associates.

Her work as a publicist has led Adamo to believe that public relations is one of the city government's weak points.

Generally supportive of the city's plans for growth, Adamo maintains that "what's lacking is a good public relations person. (City hall) is not telling residents why they're doing what they're doing, and if they did, it would stop some of the complaining."

Promotion will also help bring economic growth, she added.

"We can attract businesses and we can attract people who now say they don't want to live here and go to our schools," she said. "I want people to understand we have self-respect for this community, despite the fact that yes, we have problems."

Adamo has another hot-button issue, and that is the use of such phrases as "Southport and West Sacramento," since Southport is actually part of West Sacramento.

"This business of Southport and West Sacramento drives me up a wall," she commented. "I refer to Southport as the southern part of the city."

Likewise, she hopes residents will start to look at the city's northern neighborhoods as part of West Sacramento, and not neglect their needs in the rush to open development in the south.

"My feeling is I don't want the city to be so busy concentrating on developing in the southern part of the city that they forget what needs to be done in this part," she stated, gesturing northwards from her location at a coffee shop near West Capitol.

Overall, Adamo does not have a quarrel with any particular city departments, but she does have an issue with the city's style of management.

"I can't say there's a department I feel negative about," she commented. "Sometimes, though, I feel the departments rule the council instead of the council having the final word."

Adamo is encouraged by the city's cooperative attitude with its schools.

"We're going in the right di-planned. Now we need to decide how to implement these plans. The council majority will tell you all its wonderful plans, but they have demonstrated their inability to implement those plans."

Cahill is a financial advisor for American Express, and makes a living by analyzing a person's financial status and making recommendations to meet goals. He believes this same set of skills can help him promote economic development for the city of West Sacramento.

"Our economic development efforts are run at the middle management level of the redevelopment department," he said. "Council members neither understand nor want to be involved in this until it's a done deal. I'd be out there actively recruiting businesses. Business decision makers, people that run corporations, don't want to talk to someone who doesn't make decisions, and we have people who don't understand that."

Likewise, Cahill thinks that real-world analysis is called for as West Sacramento begins to see some of its many land-use plans start to come to fruition with an improved economy and impending growth.

"Our planning staff has done award winning work, no question about it," Cahill said. "But like any plan, or any blueprint, there's formulating a plan and then there's building it. (The council majority) thinks that if you lay out this blueprint, people will come along and lay down the pieces. But some of the lot sizes are not saleable," and the plans will need to be adjusted, he added.

Cahill lives in the Southport (southern) area of West Sacramento. He shares custody of an eight year old daughter who attends Our Lady of Grace School.

He came to West Sacramento in 1990 after spending time in town frequently for about eight years.

"I didn't come here on a wagon train," he quipped, referring to some candidates' claims of longevity in West Sacramento. "When I came here and realized what a great place it was, I wanted to stay here and set down roots. I made a conscious decision to come here."

Cahill is a chamber of commerce member, Rotary club member and serves on the board of directors of the West Sacramento Foundation, which dispenses funding to charitable local causes. He has also worked with students at Golden State Middle School.

"I taught eighth graders how to budget, how to manage money and how to apply for jobs," he said.

Cahill served as an interim editor of the West Sacramento Press newspaper for a few months in 1995, he said, because he believed it was important to help the newspaper survive so that the city could continue to have two local papers.

Probably his most prominent service was as a city planning commissioner at the time of a local debate about plans to build a "Cheaper" discount grocery store and gas station a few blocks from Cahill's neighborhood.

Appointed by city councilman Wes Beers, Cahill said he listened to neighbors' concerns about the store but came to the conclusion that the planning commission had no choice but to approve the project over their objections.

"They owned the land and they had the zoning," he said. "The zoning was approved by (councilmembers) Beers, Potnick, Tuttle et al."

The only valid concern for saying 'no' to the project was the threat of increased traffic on Jefferson Blvd., and that concern wasn't supported by a traffic study, Cahill felt. The commission voted unanimously in favor of the store.

Cahill went to the city council to explain the decision when the council opted to review it, and became a lightning rod for critics who were not pleased with his governing style.

"(The council) kicked it back to the planning commission two times and burned up about one and a half years before coming to the same conclusion we did," Cahill said. "I don't feel they had the courage or wit to do it when they should have."

And in the meantime, Beers took Cahill off the planning commission.

In general, Cahill supports many of the things done by city staff.

"We have some of the best staff and department heads I've ever encountered," he commented. "In the parks department, Don Schatzel does an incredible job with one of the most limited budgets in the city. Greater, not less, funding is needed because it provides a safe place for our children to play.

"The planning department does award winning work," Cahill continued. "It's not their fault their bosses don't seem to understand how to use it."

And the emergency response personnel are also laudable, he added.

"In the police and fire department, the quality is as good or better than anywhere. The V.I.P. program (Volunteers In Policing) is a perfect example. Chief Gore came up with that."

While Cahill said he "has a lot of respect for" members of the redevelopment agency, he is disappointed that the city has become trapped in a cycle of having to build new low income housing to meet legal requirements.

"Our redevelopment policy has been held hostage by a couple of ill advised legal settlements," he said.

One possible cure for such problems in the future, he added, would be switching to an in-house attorney staff to replace the more than $500,000 spent annually by the city on outside legal representation through private firms.

"For a half million dollars, you could fully staff at least three attorneys and three paralegal officers, and have people whose whole job is the city of West Sacramento," said Cahill.

Also in need of strengthening is the city's code enforcement department, he added, which is expected to curtail blight.

"Up until just a couple of weeks ago, we had just one code enforcement officer despite the fact that this has been a consistent complaint and a reason we can't upgrade our own image. Now, in the flurry of an election year, staff has been increased."

Cahill hopes to promote a more active code enforcement department as a councilman.

He also has ideas on how best to help the local school district in the long run.

"The most positive element of the city's relationship with the schools is found in the parks and community services department, with the joint use of facilities by the schools and facility," Cahill commented.

But economic development is the best hope for schools in the long run.

"A school district mirrors the economic viability of the community it's in. Despite the progress, you can see for the most part (school buildings) are still dilapidated physical plants. Everybody benefits from a higher property tax base and sales tax base, and secondly, if we have higher economic activity, we're going to have families more stable coming to the school district."

A high proportion of "transient" families currently in West Sacramento creates an "unfair burden" on the district, he added.

Cahill supports the current $250 campaign limit. But beyond that, he hopes to see other structural changes in government, including perhaps an elected mayor separate from the city council, like Sacramento now has in Joe Serna.

"People here ask, who's mayor this month? I'd like to see a government structure that has more accountability. I'd like to see district elections and an elected mayor. . . Sacramento has a clearer policy because Joe Serna articulates it."

rection, we're just not doing enough of it," she said. "Businesses are involved in adopt-a-school programs, and they're donating computers and employees' time. Seniors are involved in giving time. It's coming from more than one area. I'd like to see us do more in the line of helping with the (schools') buildings."

These facilities are in poor shape, she commented, and the schools may not be able to fix everything quickly on their own.

"We either have to rehab or knock some of these things down," she said. "But in the meantime, we'll need a place for the kids to go to class."

Adamo regards herself as a lower-income person running a lower-income campaign. And although she observes "there's nothing wrong with that," she admits she does not expect to win the campaign for a two-year council seat -- she would be happy just to get her message across.

"I know darn well I don't have a chance," she commented.

In the meantime, she would favor a cap on campaign spending in local races to help make it easier for common people to run for office.

And, win or lose, Dorothy Adamo expects to keep lobbying for what she thinks West Sacramento needs to do.

Comments from the City:

Construction booming

From Melinda Posner
Community Relations
Redevelopment & Housing Agency, West Sacramento

Take a drive down Industrial Blvd., or Channel Drive, or Riverside Parkway, or Jefferson Blvd., or 3rd Street in West Sacramento, and signs of construction are evident everywhere. The recent announcement of PG&E and Social Security, both to be built next year, are further indications that the City is the midst of a building boom.

There is more construction activity taking place now than what was being built in the pre-recession years of the late 1980s and early 1990s. Figures from the City's building department indicate that 1996 may set a record for the most permits ever issued since City incorporation in 1987. The Building Department has issued a total of 1,064 construction permits in the first nine and one-half months of this year. The highest number of permits ever issued for a full year was 1,185, in 1990. With two and one-half months left in the year, it is projected that total building permits issued for 1996 will exceed 1,200.

Record permit figures translate into record-high construction valuation figures, which totaled $60,442,711 for the same period, the majority from commercial development projects. This number is also expected to increase through the end of this year.

Several large-scale projects accounts for the jump in commercial activity. The Money Store, valued at $40 million, broke ground in May of 1996 and is expected to be completed in fall of 1997. Bayside Distribution, a division of MTS, Inc., is valued at $4 million and is expected to be completed this month. Three additional projects, including Tenco Tractor, valued at $3 million, Pacific Bell, valued at $3.2 million, and the Port of Sacramento warehouse building, valued at $2.3 million, account for another $8.5 million.

With completion of the Palamidessi Bridge paving the way for substantial development in the Southport area, The Money Store construction and several other milestone projects, 1997 should be another banner construction year.

of many things the young city has accomplished.

"The past council, this council and city staff don't always get the credit for the things they have done," he commented over a cup of coffee earlier this week. "That includes recreation programs, neighborhood watch programs and other things. We've put in new sewer lines and water lines and the infrastructure for good development to come in."

"Our riverfront will be a cross-section of Portland, Oregon; San Antonio, Texas; and Sydney, Australia," he continued. "We will have commercial areas and we will be able to shop locally. I see a real good housing market developing here. We have put the plans in place that will allow for good ingresses and egresses for new development to have good levels of traffic service."

With these preparations made, Kristoff sees West Sacramento "at a crossroads." Good planning will pay off as the economy improves and growth occurs in this town of about 30,000, he feels.

Other gems include improving local law enforcement and emergency response, Kristoff added.

"I hope people have seen that crime is down," he mentioned. "Our police department is doing an excellent job cleaning up West Capitol Avenue. And the fire department does a good job, too. You just look at local insurance rates -- they're some of the lowest in the area, partly due to the fire department's quick response times."

Kristoff sees room for improvement in law enforcement, however, in areas such as the Maple/Holly street neighborhood, where an improved community and police effort is called for.

"There are people living there who don't look at property rights the same way we do," he related. "People have fruit taken from their trees. If they leave a shovel or tools outside, they have those taken. We need to put together a special investigations unit for problems like that, which just attacks an area's problems. They can go in with undercover officers and just eliminate the problem. People need to know that private property is private, and people have no business taking fruit, hoses, shovels, or flowers from others."

Kristoff, 50, is a native of West Sacramento's Bryte (northwestern) neighborhood who now lives close to Park Blvd. Former manager of the Bryte post office, he serves as agent in charge of the Broderick (northeastern West Sacramento) post office while his superiors are deciding whether to appoint a new postmaster at that post.

He lives with his wife, Brenda, who is a Pacific Bell engineer/technician, and daughter Jaclyn, 16, who is a student at St. Francis High. Another daughter, Nicole, 21, is studying at UC Santa Barbara.

An avid softball player, Kristoff served on a local planning advisory council and on a county recreation commission before running for city council in 1986. He helped start Bobby Sox softball in West Sacramento and served as first umpire in chief. He also coached Pop Warner football and local little league baseball.

He started thinking about being a councilman while working for cityhood.

"I got involved in the incorporation effort, and I thought it was something that would be good for the community," he said. "Those of us who ran for council backed away from the incorporation effort to separate ourselves from it."

Kristoff placed third on the first ballot behind Mike McGowan and Fidel Martinez, in a field of over 20 candidates. He ran for re-election in 1988 and 1992.

He hopes to help guide progress if re-elected.

"The Money Store starts the development on the riverfront," he commented. "We have an opportunity there to put together a riverfront that will be a dynamic place for people to go. We're going to see restaurants and parklands and a riverfront promenade."

He offered a comment on the current controversy surrounding plans to expand part of Jefferson Blvd. to six lanes.

"I think it should be six lanes to Linden Road, and four lanes further out," Kristoff offered, toning down the six-lane plan. "If we need more lanes, we can ingresses and egresses to the 'loop roads' (intended to circle the edges of the Southport region)."

Promoting business activity is another important task, Kristoff said.

"The economic activity of California is on an upswing. We need to be aggressive in asking businesses to relocate here. We need to go to Los Angeles, we need to go to San Francisco, where businesses are leaving. We need to go to shows and write letters."

Kristoff said some of this can be accomplished by "changing some duties" in the city's economic development department.

"We need an expansion of the business retention program. We need to go to existing businesses and ask them what their needs are, and court them as far as seeing how we can help them expand. 80 percent of new growth comes from existing businesses," Kristoff commented.

Kristoff is pleased with the existing cooperation between the city and the school district.

"Working with the schools to the degree we have has been helpful to the schools, as well as to the city," he commented. "If we can put some money into the playgrounds and other facilities that serve dual purposes as parks after hours, it's good. It's a healthy partnership.

He is campaigning seriously, by both door-to-door politicking and by raising money to get his word out.

"I've been putting out fliers, I'll do a mailer, I've been knocking on doors and asking people to put signs up for me," he said. "With this campaign ordinance (limiting individual contributions to $250), there's nobody who can run those slick, expensive campaigns, and that's good."

Kristoff said he approves of the $250 limit, and would also like to check out term limits for councilman.

"I would probably support term limits," he commented. "I proposed it four years ago and it didn't go anywhere."

Although Kristoff is being promoted as part of a "slate" backed by a highly visible campaign by businessman Vince Frugoli, Kristoff doesn't see himself as part of a slate.

"Bill Kristoff is running his own campaign," Kristoff said. "I'm my own campaign chairman and manager. Vince has been a family friend for about 40 years. He supports me and I appreciate that."

Different strokes, different folks

By Betty Fairbairn Sokolich
Exhibition Chairperson
East Yolo Friends of the Library

Diversity is to be found in the West Sacramento Art Guild Exhibit at the Turner Library, 1212 Merkley Avenue, West Sacramento, from October 12 through November 30. The art group is an active group of artists with varying degrees of experience using various kinds of techniques to express their journey through life. The common bond is the interest in the visual form of art.

The WSAG meets every fourth Wednesday of the month at Trinity Presbyterian Church, 1500 Park Blvd. Anyone with an interest in art is welcome to attend the meetings at 7 p.m.

As you enter the meeting room at the library you will see "The Secret," a portrait by Joan Estelle Leed, painted in a loose vigorous style using water color. The enigmatic expression of the model's face is intriguing. Bill Leek's masterful drawing of "Taylor" is beautifully rendered in charcoal with great attention to the face and hair. "John" is also be Leek, and portrays an introspective man.

The ambiguous arrangement of the precise billboard in a pastoral setting is a statement about our present culture painted by Roger Rehm. A nostalgic memory of a "Bed and Breakfast in Edinburgh, Scotland" inspired Lillian R. Kale's charming watercolor.

Another type of watercolor called gouache (gwash) was used by Helen Sieber to create a tactile, textural painting of "Autumn in Auburn," with glowing, the warm colors of the season. Betty Fairbairn Sokolich is exhibiting two paintings: "Rain Forest," a graphic drawing done in the rain forest of Queensland, Australia, during her recent trip to the area; as well as "Frasinetti's."

Collage was use by Katharine Cheever for the delicate depiction of "Flowers." Cheever also has an "Abstract" with happy, colorful lines swirling about in an attractive pattern. Pearl Silva represents her little dog in a watercolor "Fluffy." Josephine Brown has a humorous painting called "The Big One," as well as on of her dog "Drake."

Anne Bissett Clark has returned to the area and is represented by an expertly painted Nevada scene of a "Dry Arroyo." The luminous washes of the paint give a depth and richness to the painting. A flowing line has captured the essence of a pussy cat in an art work by Michaela Bojourgeous.

A reception was held for the artists on Saturday, October 19. The exhibits are sponsored by the East Yolo Friends of the Library.

In sports: Bears midget football team loses

By Rick Barrette
West Sacramento Junior Midget Bears

The West Sacramento Junior Midget Bears fell from the unbeaten ranks this past Saturday, dropping a 19-13 decision to the Natomas Nighthawks. It figured to be a barn-burner, and both teams did their best to live up to pre-game expectations. Natomas broke a tie score on the final play of the game, completing a 42-yard touchdown pass as the horn sounded to end the contest.

The Bears' offense controlled the ball throughout the game, rolling up 397 yards in total offense and continually driving deep into Nighthawks territory. Alas, Natomas' defense bent but rarely broke. The Bears came away with only two touchdowns, even though they had six different possessions advance inside the Nighthawks' 10-yard line.

The Bears' scored their first touchdown on their second possession, with Kevin Haley rushing in from seven yards out. The big play of the drive was a 30-yard pass from Jonathan Barrette to Eddie Craig on a third-and-long situation. Rob Washington scored the P.A.T., running behind fine blocks from Robert Rodriguez and Jeff Jones. Natomas retaliated with a touchdown of their own on their next drive, set up by a 60-yard kickoff return, to tie the score at 7-7. The Bears couldn't capitalize on another drive deep into Nighthawks territory, thus they remained tied at the half.

The Bears' opening drive of the second half culminated in another touchdown run by Haley, this time from 3 yards out following crushing blocks from Damon Dosty and Jeremiah Hunt. Jesus Gaeta's pivotal 20-yard pass reception from Barrette keyed the drive. Once again, Natomas answered right back with another touchdown to tie the score at 13-13. West Sac mounted two more long drives only to come up empty near the Natomas goal both times. Oscar Gaeta's interception of a Natomas' pass late in the fourth quarter set up the Bears for one more chance to break the tie; but again, the drive stalled on Natomas' 5-yard line with 1:33 to go in the game.

The Nighthawks drove to midfield and with 8 seconds remaining, lined up for the last play of the game. The quarterback's pass barely cleared Oscar Gaeta's fingertips to a waiting receiver who crossed the goal line just as the game clock signalled the end of the game.

The Bears' offensive line, including Jared Leisure, Tommy Guerra, Sean Young and James Hampton, led the way as West Sac amassed 297 rushing yards on the day. haley carried the ball 23 times while pounding out 155 yards and scoring the two touchdowns. Other rushing leaders included Zeke Butcher with 65 yards on 10 carries, Lorenzo Castenon's 40 yards on 7 rushes and Washington with 20 tough yards on 8 handoffs.

West Sac figures to see the Nighthawks again in three weeks in the second round of the playoffs, where they look to win the war after losing this battle. The Bears travel to Davis this Saturday to play the always-tough Blue Devils. For more information, please call league president Kevin Copeline at 371-6688.

For your approval: county plan to save wildlife while making development easier

After two and a half years of planning, the final Yolo County Habitat Conservation Plan is available for public review.

The plan is intended to create a county-wide, multi-species habitat mitigation plan. It would allow developers to pay a one-time fee for their projects which would fund a trust to support land offsetting the development impact.

Each Yolo County city will hold a hearing on the plan, with West Sacramento holding a public hearing at its city council meeting on Dec. 4.

For information, contact Terry Roberts, Senior Planner, City of West Sacramento, 373-5854.
